Ben Franklin Honor Society of PIA inducts six industry notables

Harleysville, Pennsylvania - Six industry leaders were formally inducted into the Ben Franklin Honor Society of Printing Industries of America at a black-tie induction and awards ceremony held Friday, November 12, in San Francisco, California.

Doug Yeager of Alcom Printing Group — Doug is currently the Chief Operating Officer and Assistant Chairman of Alcom Printing Group, Inc. in Harleysville, PA – a company he has worked with for more than 33 years. Doug began his career with Alcom while still a junior in high school, working under a cooperative education program with the local vocational technical school. Upon graduating high school, Doug continued his education at Rochester Institute of Technology, earning a BS degree in Printing Management. Doug became a member of the Alcom Board of Directors in 1989. He was Vice President and Chairman of the Scholarship Fund in Lehigh Valley Club of Printing House Craftsmen and is currently Chairman of PGSF.

“Doug’s 33 years of service to Alcom is just a portion of the time slice that represents his passionate dedication to the overall industry itself. He is an advocate for the whole; but will always reach out to help and guide the few. On behalf of the Alcom Team, I would like to Congratulate Doug on his induction to the Honor Society and also convey our heart felt appreciation for his focus and dedication to all that is print.” says Bill Kuplen, president and CEO.

The Ben Franklin Honor Society of Printing Industries of America recognizes and honors industry leaders who have made lasting contributions to advancing the printing and graphic communications industries. This includes, but is not limited to, Printing Industries of America and its affiliates and the Print and Graphics Scholarship Foundation (PGSF). Industry visionaries who have rendered outstanding or meritorious service to those associations or the industry are eligible for membership.
